Executive Summary

Textron Aviation's SB525C-56-01 has become an important consideration in the Cessna Citation CJ4 resale market, despite the modification not being mandatory. The service bulletin addresses moisture incursion and corrosion protection around the windshield and cockpit window frames, making compliance a major factor influencing aircraft value and buyer confidence. In today's competitive private jets for sale market, compliant aircraft—or those with scheduled service appointments—often command stronger pricing and improved marketability. For owners evaluating how to sell a private jet, proactive scheduling of SB525C-56-01 can strengthen resale positioning, reduce downtime concerns, and improve transaction efficiency when working with a private jet broker or private jet expert.

Key Takeaways:

- SB525C-56-01 has become a major value driver in the Citation CJ4 market, with non-compliant aircraft often selling at significant discounts due to buyer concerns over future maintenance costs.
- CJ4 aircraft with scheduled SB525C-56-01 appointments can maintain stronger resale value, especially as Textron service center availability remains limited through 2026.
- Scheduling the service bulletin before listing can improve marketability and create a more efficient sales process for owners learning how to sell a private jet.
- jetAVIVA provides market analytics and resale guidance that help Citation CJ4 owners maximize aircraft value and navigate today's competitive business jets for sale market.
